A WAR REMINISCENCE.

An Anecdote of Greensboro Told in Far Away Texas.

I have been all the way from North Carolina to Texas, and if the world is as big every other way as it is this, it is a whopper; yet it is not so big after all, that go where you will, you will meet somebody that knows somebody that you know.

These reflections were brought about the other night while sitting in the Central Hotel office, awaiting supper, by a gentleman looking me over pretty closely and finally saying: "Where are you from—North Carolina? Ever been about Greensboro?"

"Yes."

"Know the Moreheads—Governor Morehead?"

"Yes."

"Well, upon my life, that is good. Why, I know them too. During the war I was with Sherman, and after the surrender I was a guard in front of Governor Morehead's house—yes, sir, and I walked up and down in front of that house for three weeks guarding and protecting them, and I am not telling you any story, either, for I have a letter right here, which I will give you to read, a letter from his daughter, a Mrs. Walker, thanking me, and I would not take the best hundred dollars of any man's money for it. No, sir, I would not, and I have carried it in my pocket all of these long years; and at our soldiers' re-unions, when the old fellows are telling of what they did, I tell them of what I did, and I prove it by this letter that I protected people, instead of killing them."

And then this old Federal and myself, an old Confederate, fell into reminiscent moods, talking of old times and of war; we felt a real spirit of comradeship; we fought our battles over again in the most pleasant way, without the bitterness of defeated hopes on the one side, or of arrogant victory on the other.

He has gone back to his Ohio home, and I may never see him again, but I trust that when the last tattoo is over and James Burson's name is called on a higher shore, he will answer loud and clear, "Here!"—Grand Falls, Texas, New Era.

Cenotaph to Gillies.

Oak Ridge, N. C., March 28, '98. To the Teachers and Pupils of the Graded and Public Schools of Guilford County:

Greeting—I am authorized by a committee representing the literary societies of Oak Ridge Institute to invite you to meet with the students of Oak Ridge Institute and the various high schools of Guilford county, on Friday, May 6th, 1898, for the purpose of participating in the ceremonies attending the unveiling of a cenotaph to Gillies, the bugler boy of "Light-Horse Harry" Lee's legion. We hope to make this a gala day for the young people of this county. We feel that in honoring this young patriot all the boys and girls of the county should be with us. So far as we know no other boy of Revolutionary times has been similarly honored, and yet it is fit while we are erecting monuments to statesmen and generals that this young boy, who gave his life to his country and thus aided in gaining the freedom which we so abundantly enjoy, should be honored by the youths of historic old Guilford.

The occasion falls at a time of year when a day's outing at the Guilford Battle ground will be heartily enjoyed. We hope to have every one of you grace the occasion.

Very truly yours,
Michael Schenck,
Sec. Bugler Monument Com.

WITH A SHORT MESSAGE.

The Report of the Court Sent to Congress Today.

IMPORTANT POINT CORRECTED.

Telegraphic News Bearing Directly and Indirectly on the Present Situation.

By Wire To THE TELEGRAM.

Washington, March 28—The report of the naval court of inquiry upon the loss of the Maine was sent to congress today with a brief message from the president. The report of the court does not exceed eighteen hundred words. The testimony of the court sent to the senate makes over a hundred thousand words.

The foreign relations committee protested vigorously against withholding the testimony. One important point was corrected by the testimony: That the Maine's position was not changed after she entered the port at Havana and moored on buoy but remained there until she was destroyed.

CONSIDERING THE VOTE.

Washington, March 28—At noon a special cabinet meeting is considering the vote received from Spain today accepting the proposal of the United States for armistice, pending American arbitration for permanent peace on the island of Cuba.

They are also considering the proper form in which to announce to congress and to the people the result of the negotiations with Spain.

Judge Day, after leaving the president, confirmed Secretary Proctor's statement that the president's message today would be confined to the report of the court of inquiry.

PREPARATIONS BEING RUSHED.

Washington, Mar. 28—The reported change in the administration on the Spanish situation is not officially known at the war and naval departments, and war preparations are being pushed vigorously. The officers individually believe from the outlook that hostilities are improbable.

ON THE LOOKOUT.

Key West, March 28—The entire fleet is ready for action and is eagerly on the lookout so as not to be taken unawares.

AS TO DESERTERS.

Washington, March 28—Although the Navy Department cannot make terms with deserters, officials have nevertheless stated unofficially today that if apprentices and others who have deserted return to the nearest receiving ship and the charge of desertion be removed they will be allowed to serve out their unexpired terms.

To Get Ready for Orders.

By Wire To THE TELEGRAM.
El Paso, March 18—Fort Bliss was thrown into excitement today by an order from the war department to prepare and hold two companies in readiness for marching orders within ten days.

Ordered to Hampton Roads.

By Wire To THE TELEGRAM.
Philadelphia, Mar. 28—The Columbia, one of the swiftest of modern cruisers, will sail within a few hours to join Schley's squadron at Hampton Roads, which it is believed will sail shortly under sealed orders to watch the Spanish torpedo flotilla now headed for Porto Rico.

Election in Cuba.

By Cable To THE TELEGRAM.
Havana, March 28—Reports this morning from election show official tickets of the autonomists and conservative parties were voted throughout the island as previously arranged. Twenty autonomists and ten conservatives elected. The failure of autonomists to return a number of men of prominence is one of the strongest indications that new regime is a total failure.

Working Night and Day.

Washington, March 28—A large contract for disappearing gun carriages was awarded today to the Walker Co. of Cleveland, O., whose immense foundry and machine shops have been placed at the disposal of the government.

The company will run its plant night and day to rush the work for rapid delivery. It is probable that the first deliveries will be about three weeks. This is the first contract the Walker company has taken direct from the government.

It has done such work for other companies heretofore, but has decided to take contracts direct.

DEFIANCE FROM SPAIN.

Her People Will Not Discuss McKinley's Proposition.

Madrid, March 27—El Liberal, referring to dispatches from Washington attributing to President McKinley a decision to propose that Spain should free Cuba for an indemnity, says: "The government may answer what it pleases, but the Spanish people as a whole will not deign to discuss this proposal. Spain will go to war in fulfilling her duty, but not for ephemeral ideas or the desire for conquest. We may emerge vanquished, which is somewhat doubtful, but we will never come out dishonored."

To Test the New Orleans.

Cable To THE TELEGRAM.

London, March 28—Initial cruise of the U. S. cruiser, the New Orleans, formerly Brazilian Amazonas, will be in the nature of a test of her engines and her seaworthiness. New Orleans left today in company with cruiser San Francisco, but not being as fast, the new boat will not be pushed to her speed limit. Both cruisers will be in New York next Tuesday.

You can get the telegraphic news twelve hours earlier in THE TELEGRAM than in any paper that gets into Greensboro, and for four dollars a year less.

It really appears that the Spaniards have about as poor an opinion of our fighting qualities as we have of theirs.

The Spanish torpedo flotilla now proceeding to Cuba is suspected of having a few accidents in reserve for the navy of Uncle Samuel.

The country that undertakes to arbitrate between Spain and the United States will be in a position forever afterward to appreciate the joys appertaining to the life of a base ball umpire.

The honorable Thos. Watson having had some experience with a popular nomination in 1896 is perhaps prepared to judge more accurately of its value than are some of his admiring friends.

Those who are of opinion that war is inevitable underestimate the wonders that can be worked by a little conciliatory bending of the hinges of the knee and a liberal coating of diplomacy.

The skeptical souls who doubt the qualifications of General Nelson A. Miles to be lieutenant-general should not forget his brilliant suggestion that all government mints and depositories should be fortified with a battery of rapid fire-guns.

The remark of Mr. L. C. Caldwell to the effect that Butler can wrap Shuford around his finger, leads the Statesville Landmark to infer that Caldwell is against Butler. Seems to be a reasonable inference. But there will be a hot time in these parts when Butler turns against Caldwell.—Raleigh Post.

The honorable Marion remarked sometime ago, we believe, that his only safety lay in raising a hot time or words to that effect.

The events of the past six weeks prove conclusively that the New York Journal is America's greatest newspaper. It pleads guilty to a sensationalism that prints all the news from the freshest sources, and often before its contemporaries have realized the importance of the news which its correspondents have given in detail.—News-Observer.

It seems to be true that the facts in the destruction of the Maine are as yellow as the deepest tinged imagination of an Havana correspondent. It is true that the position first assumed by the New York Journal was very nearly correct. It is not that the yellow journals do not print the news. They print a great deal that is accurate enough. They are yellow because they print a great deal that they know at the time to be absolutely false. It was only the other day that a New York Journal correspondent faked an interview with Assistant Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt and then with sublime gall wrote to the secretary, asking him not to deny the interview. If the facts are yellow enough as they are found to exist these papers print them as they are; if they are not yellow enough they color them. One can never be certain whether the news they print is real or a fake. That's why they are called yellow journals.

Let us hope that the illustrious secretary of war will be somewhat more fortunate in providing for the army than he was in fitting out his reindeer expedition to the Klondyke.

The impression seems to be growing and is beginning to find expression here and there that so far as the administration is concerned there is a good deal of playing to the galleries in the hurried preparations for war which have been going on for the past month. Mr. McKinley is neither a forceful nor a self-confident man. He has neither the courage nor the pig-headed self-conceit of his predecessor. Why is it then that Mr. McKinley should be so anxious that the management of American-Spanish affairs should be left exclusively to the executive branch of the government.

Is Mr. McKinley of the opinion that he alone is possessed of the political wisdom necessary to the occasion? There appears to be a power behind the throne. As a matter of common humanity no objection will be made by the American people to an appropriation by congress for the benefit of the starving reconcentrados. But such an appropriation is at best only a measure of temporary relief. Does Mr. McKinley propose that congress shall go on forever attempting to feed the victims of Spanish cruelty? There is a certain element in this country that is quite as indifferent to human suffering as the Spaniard. Has this element a string tied to Mr. McKinley? We shall see by and by.

HAVE APES A LANGUAGE?

Results of Prof. Garner's Study of the Speech of the Simians.

The possibility of an actual language existing among the ape tribes, or at least an intelligent interchange of thought by other means than discordant cries and gesticulations, has ever proven an interesting subject, in the study of which, however, we have been able to get but little beyond the point of bare conjecture; but now that each city has its large zoological garden in which the best species of monkeys and apes are under the daily observation of natural scientists, the study of these animals has assumed a more tangible shape, and their means of conveying thought has now a recognized place in philology. Among the pioneers in this field of study was the extensive traveller and most interesting writer, Prof. Garner, best known perhaps in the western states as the founder of what is known as institute work for teachers. Personally he made an early choice of philology as his life study, and soon gained the distinction of being able to correctly enunciate the phonetic elements of every spoken language; that is, a combination of consonants, or a modification of vowels, such as for instance, the Russian gartschi, the original Greek phthi, or the African gkwa of Ba-nu, which not one man in hundreds ever learns to correctly pronounce.

During the pursuit of his studies of the character of speech, vocal sounds, &c., Prof. Garner developed the then startling theory of speech in animals, and began from time to time to investigate the sounds made by domestic animals to ascertain to what extent they bore a resemblance to sounds made in human speech. These sounds made by domestic animals were at first considered and classed as sound made by the vocal organs of animals, with no attempt to interpret their meaning, but as his study and observation progressed he conceived the idea that it was possible for a human being to learn the meaning of at least some of these sounds, the idea being naturally suggested by the invariable recurrence of certain signs under the same or similar conditions, together with the fact that other animals of the same kind understood and acted on those sounds. Following this with a comparative study of the skulls, brains, nervous system, &c., of various animals, he discovered that those animals with the higher cerebellar development appeared to possess a more copious and uniform set of sounds. Thinking it best to confine his investigation to one animal, he finally selected for this purpose monkeys and apes, as offering perhaps the most promising field for observation, and in 1884 he began a systematic, untiring study of these animals.

Prof. Garner then lived in Cincinnati, and became a frequent visitor at the splendidly equipped zoological garden of that city, where on nearly every pleasant afternoon, he might have been seen in the department occupied by the apes, gaining every possible insight into their various sounds and actions. His interest finally became centered in a lot of monkeys who occupied a cage in common with a big, savage mandrill, which was held in very evident dread by the monkeys. One morning the professor made an early visit to the little monkeys and big mandrill, and finding the former in a state of chattering fright, and the mandrill in an unusually ugly humor, thought he could not find a better object lesson than the group or collection before him, so spent most of the day in their company. As the day wore on, and the mandrill would assume positions about the cage, it became perfectly clear that the monkeys could not only warn some less watchful companion that danger was imminent, but could indicate the character of that danger. When professor Garner fully established this fact, his observation became so closely concentrated on these particular monkeys as to enable him to finally distinguish and interpret two entirely dissimilar sounds, which were as clear in meaning to him, as to those for whom they were meant.

From this time he set himself to the unique work of interpreting, and if possible giving to the public the meaning of all those sounds we have heard coming from a cage of monkeys since we attended our first circus. He had learned all it seemed possible to get from the animals in captivity, although he redoubled his observations at this and other gardens in his now determined effort to master this heretofore unheeded language. The first and greatest obstacle encountered was his inability to distinguish with required nicety between certain sounds, very similar, but with evidently more than one meaning. It was difficult to remember sounds made in one garden sufficiently to accurately compare them with what was intended for the same sound in other gardens.

The phonograph impressed the professor as exactly filling this want and was at once brought into use. Such sounds as has been learned and understood by phonograph in one garden, and then, under favorable conditions, were reproduced in another garden, affording an excellent opportunity to watch he conduct and record the replies of the of the strange monkeys.

This tedious but reliable method was finally exhausted, and if the study was to be prosecuted further it must be among the wild, fierce apes in their native haunts. Fully aware of the peril and hardships attending this apparently impracticable undertaking, the professor began to devise plans by which he could actually visit and live with the gorilla in the wilds of an African forest.

[Through the courtesy of professor Garner, who has been spending some weeks at the Benbow hotel, we are enabled to give our readers a summary of the life work of this distinguished scientist in his study of animals, especially apes, and their means of communication. The second of these short papers will appear tomorrow.]

great organs of the body; therefore, it causes the heart to beat with greater force, the lungs to take in more oxygen and to expel more carbonic acid; it induces the kidneys to send off more of the poisonous ex-cretions from the blood; the bowels to have more regularity and healthfulness in their action; the sweat glands to throw out more impurities.
Our illustrated book of 35 pages will tell you what is the matter and what to do. Its

EDMUND BURKE.

An Able and Versatile Statesman Who Never Attained High Office.

Though Burke never attained high office his abilities were so versatile as to qualify him for any post which a cabinet minister could fill. His practical wisdom was as conspicuous as his power of generalization. No one had a clearer comprehension or a firmer grasp of great principles of universal application; at the same time his policy in every department of English politics rested on a wide and solid basis of information and experience. He was steeped in the history of the past, yet penetrated through and through with the reality of the present and ever and always mindful of that future in which the speculations and measures of the day were to be tested and finally approved or condemned. His prodigious activity in public affairs sprang not from an intellectual source alone, nor from his imperial patriotism. It was constantly fed from an inexhaustible store of moral energy.
He was animated by a detestation of all forms of oppression, whether by kings or governors, parliaments or peoples,
which was in him a consuming passion,
from which his noble nature could only obtain relief by denunciation of the oppressor and the destruction of his power.

I cannot help thinking that Burke must have been stimulated, too, and sustained by delight in his studies and his work. It is impossible, without counting this as an additional incentive, to understand the amazing industry which he devoted to the elucidation of all the great questions dealt with in his speeches and writings. How his method reproves the habit, too common in our day, as in other days, of debating subjects affecting the fate of millions of our fellow creatures as if they could be disposed of by echoing the chatter of ignorance, or prejudice, or vanity, or self interest! When we read Burke's speech on Fox's East India bill, we say, "What a great pronouncement he would have made!"
When we read his speech on conciliation with America, we feel that the greatness of colonial ministers was lost in him, and when we read his speech on economical reform we exclaim, "Here is an ideal chancellor of the exchequer!"—
J. O'Connor Power in North American Review.

SMOKED CANARY BIRDS.

Do Clouds From a Pipe Develop a Rich Color In Their Plumage?

A little old shoemaker who has a busy, old style cobbling shop on the east side is a bird fancier, and he has peculiar ideas about canaries. One night he was sitting on his leather covered bench, smoking an extremely odorous quality of tobacco in a black pipe. A customer was waiting for him to finish straightening up a worn heel, and he made several remarks concerning the birds which hung about the cobbler's shop. They were fancy birds, and he could not help noticing it. Finally he asked the shoemaker how he got such richly colored birds.
"It's part in the breeding and part in the atmosphere," said the cobbler.
"You raise birds in a shop where two or three men are constantly smoking, and in time you will get the darkest orange color if you use a little judgment in mating and they don't run to green."
"I should think that tobacco smoke would be unwholesome for the birds," said the visitor.
"On the contrary, it makes them
hardy and seems to be good for them every way. Women who have canaries would do well to put them where they can get a little tobacco smoke once in awhile, although I don't think cigarette smoke would do them much good. What they need is strong tobacco smoke from an old pipe like this or the smoke from a black cigar. I've raised my best birds when I had two jowls working in this little shop with me and all of us smoking pretty nearly all the time."
Then the old man sighed and said:
"That was before they half soled and heeled shoes while you wait—before machines were used for cobbling. No two or three jowls and an apprentice for me now. I sit here alone, with my birds, pegging away and keeping them well
smoked."—New York Sun.

Road and River.

The brave Pierre Stuppa, the Swiss general, having been deputed by the 18 cantons to solicit the arrears of pay which had been owing for a long time to the Swiss officers in the French service, M. de Louvois, the war minister, who was present, said to the king,
Louis XIV:
"Sire, those Swiss are very importunate. If your Majesty had all the money that your royal predecessors have given to that people, it would form a river
from Paris to Basel."
"That may be," observed Stuppa with an air of firmness, "but at the same time if your Majesty had all the blood that the Swiss have shed in the service of France it would form a river
from Paris to Basel."
The king was so struck with the observation that he ordered M. de Louvois to pay the whole of the money without delay.—Nuggets.

A Courtesy.

The Boston Globe of last Saturday has a cut of the Benbow House and part of Elm street in it. The cut showed the hotel off to fine advantage. It is through the courtesy of Mr. T. H. Murnane, correspondent, that the cut appears. In addition to being an advertisement for our town it is a recognition of the efforts of Manager Morton to make the stay of the champions in our town pleasant.

Good News Predicted.

We venture the prediction that ground will be broken for the new Southern depot in less than sixty days. This is indeed a consummation devoutly to be wished.

We also believe that when the Southern gives Greensboro a passenger depot it will be a good one and in keeping with Greensboro's needs as a station doing a large local and transfer business.

Pitched a Great Game.

The many friends of John Tate, pitcher for the University team, and whose home is in this city, are jubilant over his fine work in the game last Friday. A note from the University says Mr. Tate pitched a great game, exceeding the most sanguine expectations of the Varsity contingent. Wake Forest succeeded in getting only five hits off of him, while Williams was batted all over the field for a total of thirty-one hits. Struck out by Tate, seven; by Williams, four.

"WE'RE COMING."

Food for Suffering Cubans and War Implements Enroute.

A southbound freight train passed here last night about 9:30. The flat car next to the engine carried a large coast defense gun thirty feet long from the Southwork Foundry and Machine Company, Philadelphia, going to Galveston, Texas. On the gun were the following words written with chalk in large letters: "Lookout Spain, We're Coming."

At about 3:30 in the afternoon of yesterday a freight passed going north. The front car in this train was loaded with provisions for the Cubans from the Atlanta Journal, going to New York to be forwarded from there. The car was placarded: "First contribution from Atlanta Journal to the Cuban relief fund." Near the rear of the car were two large American flags crossed.

Why Not Greensboro?

We understand that there is an effort being made to establish an army post at Raleigh. Why should not Greensboro have it? We also understand the war department requires an offer of 1,200 acres of land in order to secure the location. Is it worth the trial?

Oak Ridge Ball Players.

The Battle Ground.

Apropos of the item in the Telegram a few days ago relative to the county commissioners and the condition of the battle ground road, we get the following information from a member of the board: The Battle Ground company sometime ago, through its attorney, asked the commissioners to furnish a surveyor or civil engineer to survey the road and establish grades, also for terra-cotta pipe to be used in repairing and building the road.

As far as he remembers the commissioner says this is all the request which has been made. The pipe has been furnished, and the services of the engineer promised whenever wanted. In justice to the county commissioners we print the above facts as given to us by a member of the board.

ADVERTISEMENTS.

A student plied a college professor with a series of questions to each of which the professor laconically replied "I don't know."

"Why," finally said the student, "I thought we were sent here for you to tell us what we don't know."
"Young man," replied the professor you are sent here for us to tell you what we know, and that is soon done. To tell you what you don't know would be an endless undertaking.

It is somewhat that way in writing advertisements, we can soon tell you what we know, or can think of, that will interest you; but if you should come down and look through you will find an endless variety of useful articles that you had no idea that we kept in stock.

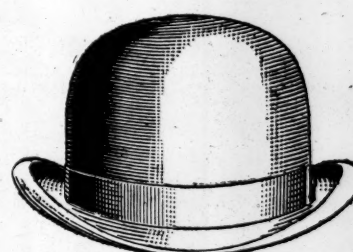

Did you see the exhibit of the Universal Food Chopper a few days ago? It is a most wonderful machine. It will do as many things as a magician can perform tricks. You would be surprised to see the tricks it will do. It chops beefsteak, grinds coffee, crackers, and in fact anything you can get in it, except horse shoes, lamp chimneys and the like.
